

Sounding Out! Podcast Episode #5: Sound and Spirit on the Highway

David B. Greenberg

Blog post published January 19, 2012 in Sounding Out!

<https://doi.org/10.59350/st9rd-21581>

Abstract

This podcast examines the prominent role of audio in the daily spiritual practice of Christian truck drivers. Using the lived examples of these drivers as an entry point, this segment explores the ways in which listening practices help to establish community and ground spirituality for individuals who spend long hours on the road.

Keywords

Music (Subfield), Field Recording, Identity, Listening, Place And Space, Podcast

Recommended citation

Greenberg, D. B. (2012, January 19). Sounding Out! Podcast Episode #5: Sound and Spirit on the Highway. Sounding Out!. <https://doi.org/10.59350/st9rd-21581>

Copyright

Copyright © David B. Greenberg 2012. Distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License, which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original author and source are credited.

Click to view slideshow.

This podcast examines the prominent role of audio in the daily spiritual practice of Christian truck drivers. Using the lived examples of these drivers as an entry point, this segment explores the ways in which listening practices help to establish community and ground spirituality for individuals who spend long hours on the road.

CLICK HERE TO DOWNLOAD: Sound and Spirit on the Highway

SUBSCRIBE TO THE SERIES VIA ITUNES

DOWNLOAD A TRANSCRIPT: Sound and Spirit on the Highway Transcript

—

David B. Greenberg is a graduate of Oberlin College, where he studied religion, with an emphasis on Modern American Religious History. This podcast draws from his ethnographic research study, “Highway Religion: Truckstop Chapels, Evangelism, and Lived Religion on the Road.” David also performs and records as a singer-songwriter, and currently lives in New Jersey.