This is a comparison of two soundwalks performed by SO! Multimedia Editor Aaron Trammell in two different cities—New Brunswick, NJ and Davis, CA. In this podcast Aaron listens to his footsteps and considers the sonic interactions between individual and environment. Specifically, he considers how the artist must always contend with the degree to which they are audible in the soundwalks they record, thus marking a radical departure from visual modes of inquiry that render the research invisible. Let's join Aaron as he walks us through two cities he loves.
